At San Diego State, almost 400 students registered with the Peace and Freedom Party, an organization that helps bring a peace movement to the state in the 1968 Presidential election.

On the East coast, angry demonstrators surged to the Pentagon, where 99 Army paratroopers, many of them Viet Nam veterans, kept them under control.

Meanwhile, at Miracosta College, high atop a green, peaceful hill, drenched with a lazy coating of Indian summer sunbeams, and over­looking a blue, inviting Pac­ific Ocean — there’s nothing happening.

How come? It is the purpose of this article to explore some of the causes of apathy, both on the campus and in the community. Possibly interviews with students, teachers, and citizens will reveal some of the causes of apathy.

Broman Combines Music Research With Politics Talk In Sabbatical

Can you imagine a woman sitting in a library wetting her finger and turning the page of a book? And almost getting arrested?

It happened. Dr. Keith L. Broman, professor of music, was sitting next to her. She was in the rare books room in the library of the British Museum in London.

Her research connected with the sabbatical leave he took in England last semester. The British is offered by an educational institution to one of its faculty with seven years of service.

Dr. Broman, with his wife Carol, daughter Deborah, and a nephew, rented a two-bedroom apartment in London that cost them the equivalent of $65 a week. After Dr. Broman had been notified as to the availability of the apartment, the man who was subletting to one of its faculty, with seven years of service, who was subletting to one of its faculty, who was subletting to one of its faculty, who was subletting to one of its faculty, who was subletting to one of its faculty.

Dr. Broman said he was interested in all kinds of research connected with the museum. He said he would talk to the librarian of the British Museum about the possibility of working there.

He also said that he is a "poor" campus. "We don't have the affluent kids. Some of the kids he met were very interested in art and music, but they couldn't afford to go to the museum."

He added, "He was a wonderful guy, a very generous person. At the end of the stay he asked us if we wanted to take anything from the apartment as a momento." The man also gave Dr. Broman a farewell party, complete with food from countries behind the Iron Curtain.

Dr. Broman said he discussed politics on an interpersonal level. "The attitude in Europe is that the Communist party is just another political party. It is not judged with the alarm as in the United States.

The reason, he says, is that in Europe they have always had active Communist and Socialists parties in their national governments. He said, "In the United States we have disallowed this. We don't allow the Communists to operate within our government."

Dr. Broman picked Michael East, a sixteenth century musician and composer, as a study for his research.

He did his research in the library of the British Museum, the largest museum in the world. Dr. Broman worked on a set of 16 verse translations by the summer. He did his research in the library of the British Museum, the largest museum in the world. Dr. Broman worked on a set of 16 verse translations by the summer. Dr. Broman assisted in the project.

Dr. Broman completed three anthems out of the 16. To do this he had to first study the original handwritten works. Then he had to compare those with the first "crudely published" works. "I found over 200 differences in all 16 anthems," he said. "In order to complete the anthems, Dr. Broman asked permission to have the documents photographed. The museum had a standing rule that no such documents could be photographed," he said.

He is working on the copies and hopes to complete the translations by the summer.

Dr. Broman observed classes and teaching techniques at the Guild Hall School of Music and Drama in London.

He said the English instructors are much more traditional than their American counterparts. They are more concerned with their students' grades and their students' success. "It is up to the student entirely," he said.

The student is working towards a state-administered exam constructed for the purpose of testing him in his area, Dr. Broman said.

"Teachers could care less about the student," he said. "If a student is on the ball he lets him pass the test. The teacher neither makes up nor administers the test. It is not his responsibility to judge the student."

Dr. Broman said that they do not "sloppen" the students as is done in our system. "Because the responsibility is all on the student, they cannot possibly have some kind of student-teacher relationship as here."

Spartans Drop Palomar Comets 16-15

WE DO IT AGAIN!

You have ever wondered what happens on football busses? Well, that’s from five to ten hours traveling time on a chartered Greyhound.

This is our concept has players huddled in small groups and discussing upcoming game strategy. They could have their avid interest continue, but it is more likely grouped around a recent issue of Playboy or Mad magazine.

It is amazing the amount of trivial bard on a five-hour bus trip. If the question ever comes up in later life as to who would win a fight between a buffalo and a rhino, by listening attentively to a bud game brokes up early and you would know odds are five to three in favor of the first.

That is taking into account the buffalo being born and raised on the prairie and lama and rhino having one horn.

Although Spartan gridders traveled nearly 2000 miles on the Coalinga trip is typical to describe.

We arrived at Bakersfield for an overnight stop and the following day for breakfast. Since we hadn’t eaten from the time we departed five hours earlier, the assault upon the dining area looked like a Vietnamese fire fight. Some slower eaters took a minute and a half to devour their stack of pancakes.

Some slower eaters took up and this presented a problem. Overcoming a stack of pancakes. They could.

Preceding game strategy. They could devote a kick and then took off around left end with the speed that marks Carlsbad high school backs.

A wall of white jerseys developed and Spartan fans suddenly had something to yell about. Dan went 57 yards to score, faking two comets that had a shot at him.

Then occurred the play that had Spartan fans wondering that Corrigan must be the c ANNiest coach in California.
