Local Kids ’Come Together’ Over Community Problems

"Come Together."

This theme will key the action for the “Youth Reflects On Community Problems” forum scheduled for November 13 and 15 on the Spartan campus.

Forum president Bill Moore and his staff of planners are planning for an estimated 300 delegates nearly 100 supporting personnel during the two-day activity.

Delegations from high schools, civic organizations, churches, colleges and Camp Pendleton have been invited to the confab designed to bring about a student confrontation with city officials on community problems.

“We’re inviting the mayors of both Oceanside and Carlsbad, the city council, the human relations commission, the Community Action Council, Chambers of Commerce and influential community members to the Forum,” said Moore.

“They will be acting as observers and able to watch the students in action, expressing their ideas. We’re hoping that this will establish some guidelines for reconsidering the statement ‘There Are No Problems in Ocean­side.’”

A series of workshops will investigate series of issues including improving relationships with the military, improved recreation activities, youth employment opportunities, housing problems, pornography and programs for involving youth in community activities.

“This is a good opportunity for all factions of youth in the community to come together and exchange ideas in a free atmosphere,” Moore pointed out.

“We’re hoping that the committee programs and projects instituted by the forum will carry over into some worthwhile community action as well as helping our city officials get to know how the youth feel about certain issues.”

Students interested in participating in the Forum can still contact Bill Moore or one of the student representatives for more information.

A Moment Of Silence

Honor’s Vietnam Dead

A moment of silence will be observed at 11 a.m. this morning in respect for the dead of all wars which depleted the ranks of our citizenry.

Bill Moore, ASB president, said the observance was in advance of the November 11 “Veterans Day,” a school holiday, on which such observances are normally held.

He said the observance had been announced, but due to the small “reach” of the student center public address system, and the fact that many students would be elsewhere on the campus at that time, the rendering of a minute’s silence at exactly 11 a.m. would be appropriate cooperation. Moore was expecting to have the additional cooperation of the teachers through announcements of this in their respective rooms.

“This is made even more timely by the emphasis given to the present war situation by the President’s speech Monday night,” said Moore, “it could be a ‘first’ for MiraCosta. I don’t remember this being done before.”

He went on to say that the observance had been initiated by members of the MiraCosta Veterans Club.

“‘The observance will be very simple, really,’ said Moore. ‘If we’re walking, we can be quiet for a minute. If we’re talking, we can be quiet for a minute. The Veterans Club is planning to have a bugler sound ‘Taps.’ That’s all there is to it.”

Costans Anticipate Four-Day Vacation

The general opinion, especially among Marines, former and present, is that Monday is a Mira Costa holiday for the USMC’s birthday.

Actually, the day off is granted by the Board of Trustees under their right of granting a school holiday on a school day between the weekend and a legal holiday.

In this case, Tuesday is nationally observed as Veterans’ Day and the trustees have declared Monday a “local” holiday.

So, whether you do or don’t have an allegiance to the Marine Corps, you can stay home both Monday and Tuesday of next week.

Sopwith Camel Heads Rock Festival Line-up

The Costa Rock Festival will be presented Nov. 15 beginning at 11 a.m. on the campus lawn above the student center.

Two stages are scheduled to be set up, and as one band sets up, another will perform, resulting in continuous sounds.

“The Glass Family,” “Sopwith Camel,” and other local groups and vocalists will be featured in a car­nival-like atmosphere, including concession stands and club booths to handle an expected one thousand pop­enthusiasts.

Pre-sale tickets are available for $1.75 at the campus book store, but are not in quantity, so first come first served. Gate tickets will be sold beginning at 10 a.m. Nov. 15 on campus for $2.50.

Kathy Ferguson Selected Queen

Kathy Ferguson is smiling more these days.

And, that’s no surprise since the 18-year-old freshman was crowned MiraCosta Homecoming Queen 1969 last Saturday during halftime activities.

A graduate of Oceanside High School, she is interested in pursuing a Business major in a San Francisco city college upon her graduation. She also wants to travel around and even go abroad “just to meet all kinds of people and do different things.”

“It’s really an honor to be chosen...I really didn’t know anyone on campus,” said Kathy.

“still have trouble believing that it was me. I was disappoint­ed in the news coverage by a lo­cal paper, however, because people kept calling me up and asking who won; it was a lot of extra trouble.”

Kathy enjoys MCO but wishes “that it was just a bit bigger. The students are really nice here and it seems like one big happy family.”

Letters

Editor:

This is to express my deepest appreciation to all those who helped with the 1969 Homecoming. If it had not been for this minute handful of people MCC would not have had a Homecoming. They did a great job!

Now, the rest of this letter is dedicated to those, which constitute the majority of MCC's student body — the APATHETIC ones. Thanks for all your help! Might you students be reminded that in order to have an active campus you, yourselves, have to participate in it. Sign your complaining and begin to become involved, it wouldn't hurt you in the least. The vast majority of the students on this campus find nothing but fault with everything, rather than attempt to do well. We are going to do something about it, besides breath a lot of hot air about it.

Wake up MCC and put spirit in doing and feeling. Because, we're going to lose in the battle of a together world. Must try to get on our own two feet from now on, or else we're going to lose in the battle of a together world.

If you have been moved by this article in any way, come to the Campus Comment. If it had not been considered before the students on the patio. But Mr. Steano would tabled the amendments expressly that they could be considered before the students on the patio. But Mr. Steano would not wait.

The senate has now formed a committee to further investigate the possibility of amending the present literature policy. It can only be hoped that the product of their deliberations will be more acceptable.

Most of the students of this campus are concerned for the rights of the minority and, certainly, for the right to free thought. The requirements for literature on MiraCosta have been good taste and college level expression. Comic books, smut novels, and obscene papers are only too available downtown. They certainly don't add anything constructive to an education, so let's not lend them the dignity of our campus.

Campus Comment

By Bill Neiler
AS Representative

Perhaps the student body might be interested as to the outcome of those proposed amendments in the Campus Comment last week. As a matter of "fact," those amendments were so poorly considered that Art Streano, himself, withdrew them.

According to the wording of the proposed amendments, if a petition were presented to the senate on a Thursday, it would have to have been voted on Friday to conform to the stipulation of "... no less than four days." To force an issue on an electorate in an extremely short time interval is patently an inferior practice. Furthermore, since every member of the senate is elected by a majority, and no individual member could possibly force an election, it seems a bit unreasonable that a minority of just 5 percent could force one.

As for the claim for more popular exposure on this issue, I labeled the amendments expressly that they could be considered before the students on the patio. But Mr. Steano would not wait.

Cheryl Hart is the Editor of Campus Comment.

It's About Time To Start Growing

If we examine the truth about ourselves as students on this campus, going full time to college during the day or evening, then we shall find that maybe we deserved to lose last Saturday's game against Saddleback.

First of all, we must concede to the fact that very few of us, if that many, have shown a real interest in belonging to the new generation of leaders in a free society. We have all failed, so far, our existence as growing human beings, because none of us have felt an emotion towards togetherness, at least on this campus.

No enthusiasm, or as others might put it, no spirit, results in an education, so let's not lend them the dignity of our campus.

Six Characters Search For Life Through Drama

Once upon a time, six characters were envisioned by an author. These characters constantly haunted the author, attempting to persuade him to record their drama so as to give them full life. This is the base on which Luigi Pirandello wrote Six Characters in Search of an Author, the fall play chosen by Mr. Joseph Sassay, head of the MiraCosta College drama department.

Mr. Sassay is directing the play, which will be presented November 19-22 in the Little Theater. Tickets are $1.25 for Adults and free with an A.S. Card. (1 ticket per card and can be obtained in the Bookstore or phone 720-3211. The play opens on a rehearsal scene in a small theater when the action is interrupted by the arrival of six "beings" claiming to be characters. Their desire is to play their drama in hopes that the manager will record it so that they can live eternally in the world of theater.

Conflicts between reality and illusion become prominent in the dialogue, as the actors and manager become involved in the characters' scenes.

By the end of the play reality and illusion are entirely confused and the manager, utterly frustrated calls rehearsal for the day.

By nature, guitarists are a creative lot. They realize that guitar helps them learn and grow and become more creative as they master the instrument. They love the warm reaction of the audience after a good performance. They enjoy the feeling of satisfaction they get from learning each new song, even if they only play for themselves. And they know that the key ingredients to good music are a willingness to learn, a lot of practice and a good instrument to learn on. This is where we can get together. If you've got the desire and the creativity, we've got the other element: the finest selection of quality guitars in North County. At the lowest prices. Our selection of fine instruments name brand instruments such as Martin, Gibson and Fender to the little giants of the guitar world like Wilson and Yamaha. We're especially interested in serving students who are undertaking guitar classes because we realize that you can't be an adequate guitarist with an inadequate instrument. Take that major step towards good musicianship at Oceanica Music Supply: North County's Music Realization Center.
Spartans Lose First Game
To Hard-Hitting Saddleback

By John Dougherty
Charriot Sports Editor

If Miracosta had any quarter, it was the third when the Spartans scored their only TD of the game on a 14-yard pass from Simi Faassas to Willie Buchanan. Jim Burgess kicked the extra point. Saddleback dominance in the first two quarters earned touchdowns which won the game. George Hartman, the Gaucio coach, remarked after the game that he was surprised the Spartan defensive backs did such a great job of defending his receivers. This forced him to use his running game and especially Toby Whipple who accounted for 217 yards in 35 carries. Sporty Willis fought for 27 yards to lead the Spartans and John Douglas had another 19. Tomorrow night the Spartans travel to San Jacinto which is still an important game for MCC griddiers if they have any hopes of winning the conference title.

MEET AT FIESTA ISLAND ON OCTOBER 31.

Saddleback at COD 13-7 Victory last Friday night with one of the largest crowds to gather for a Homecoming game.

We're still in it," said Spartan Coach Bill Corchran. "It's a big order to beat Mt. San Jacinto, but it might be easier for us to beat the Eagles and it might be easier for the Eagles to beat Saddleback than it was for us. Saddleback and Mt. San Jacinto won't play until the final week of the season, but they could do it."
