Planning ahead: prelude to work, life success

By STEVE GATTO

Is there life after high school? This is a question that thousands of high school seniors were pondering recently, filling the counselor's offices at area high schools.

One question asked, "Where do I go from here?" is if going to college, getting a job, or starting college student. However, many find themselves thrust into the work force to help make ends meet. These are factors which contribute to the decline in the number of students who enter college.

A different pattern emerged for those who entered college after graduation. Thus, it's been established that most high school seniors do not know what they're doing after high school, but what do they plan to do in the future? Less than half of the seniors responding to Excalibur's survey said they know what they're doing it and why they're doing it.

Many think they will have a higher education, but what do they think they will major in? More confusing is the deciding factors which cause you want to improve your skills, but what are they doing after high school.
Ade are the message

By JUDITH WINEBERG

We don't hear anything from Marshall McLuhan anymore. Remember, He used to say "The media is the message," or was it "The medium is the message?" At any rate, it was something profound indicating television was a cultural wasteland. That is so, only if one doesn't know how to listen to it properly.

I figured if all those voices were going to invade my living room, it could pay off to listen to some of the messages. It went like this.

I used to have difficulty just getting the meals out, taking the kids around and the dog to the vet. That is all changed now. I do all this with ease, besides raising Arabian horses, and holding down a full-time job as a nuclear physicist. How, you say? Easy. I take Geritol once a day and go for a swim.

Similarly, I could barely fly a kite in the old days. Now I float over the ocean and the bluffs along La Jolla and Torrey Pines, feeling confidently in the grip of a glider. You have probably seen me up there looking nonchalant. You want the secret, right? Pop a piece of Wrigley's chewing gum in your mouth before take-off. It gets you up everytime.

Most important to me, is the relationship with my spouse. It was always good, but not great. From the very beginning, I realized some small ingredient that could put it over the top, was mine, in meaning, I could never have a second cup. Now the coffee situation is under raps and with no "ring around the collar" our marriage seems made in heaven.

In the way of a bonus, let me tell you this—with the nightly use of Oil of Olay, I now look the same age as my children. This is because the cells are mostly grown, but imagine how that might work if your child was three years old.

Closing, then, let's try to remember, that modern advertising can change your life; but use it with caution least you become too energized, too clean or too young for your own good.

Film series part of Holocaust memorial

Israel's Day of Remembrance of the six million Jewish victims of the Nazi Holocaust began last week in a memorial rally in Jerusalem.

The annual Day of Remembrance comes in the wake of the 37th anniversary of the War — many of us who had known the war.

Radio Times, in its 63rd anniversary issue, pointed out the construction in the United States of a 220,000-foot edifice of 120,000 images of the 6 million Jews who died in the Holocaust. It was described as the National Holocaust

Storage shed added

The Agriculture Department recently acquired a new storage shed, which is located on the south end of the Horticulture lot. The shed, which cost $6,000, is "a dream come true after two years of planning. The new storage shed cost $6,000. The unit is capable of holding farm equipment, such as the new sprinkler system. The Agriculture Department plans to move the present garden to the south end of the lot, and turf will be put in where the garden is now. The present sidewalks will be destroyed and decomposed granite will be put in their place. And where there were not any decomposed granite, there will be new sidewalks. There will also be an entirely new sprinkler system, which will be controlled by an automatic converter, which can turn on and off at any time of the day. The staff is busy digging up the news and report any problem that may have evolved as a result of his request."
